"THE TIME, THE PLACE AND THE GIRL."

The brazen effrontery and impertinence of the management of the outfit called "The Time, The Place and The Girl" is charging $2.00 a sent to see a third-rate company in the absurd mixture has seldom been equaled here by the best grafters who come with a show. Undeniably, John E. Young is great. He is a whole show in himself, and well worth any one's time. His stock of slang and method of delivery is unequaled on the stage by any one today, and he made an instantaneous hit with the audience the first night, and had them every step of the way. He is very fin-ished in everything he does, and it is too bad that he is not with a better company.

Elizabeth Goodall, as Molly Kelley, the nurse, was really the only one worth praise among the ladies, but she was great and happily cast opposite Mr. Young, It is too much of a task to dilate upon the faults of the other principals and the poorly drilled chorus. Most of the dialogue outside of that between Mr. Young and Miss Goodall was inane. Jessie Huston as The Girl had opportunities for making good which she did not accept, and a great deal too much time was taken up by Eulalic Jensen in the display of a pair of frombones encased in red and yellow tights.

For thirty cents and down, the Lyric has presented a number of surprising novelties in its bill this week, playing to good business every right.

THERE WAS A TIME.

In this town, not so very long ago, when it was impossible to find a place really suitable to take a lady to luncheon, dinner or supper after the theatre, where good things to eat, well cooked and the best things to drink could be found. Then, too, it was an impossibility to find a place where fine music could be enjoyed during the repast, the claim being made that the town was not equal to it, that the people were not ready to pay for good meals, and that the expense of fine music could not be justified. We have proven at the Louvre that this is not true, that people know a good thing when they see it and like to patronize it, but the majority of the great American public are from Missouri and you've got to show them first. 'Ve have done it in the edibles served, in the buyling of everything that the market affords, in a complete stock of finest wines and liquors, in the service given and the order maintained, and with the finest cafe orchestra in the west.

Right now.
